Wealth taxation: the Algerian and the French experience

Wealth taxation is currently at the heart of debates. It remains contested in its principle and its application procedure. In comparative law, the existence of wealth tax has known a curious destiny. Many countries have abolished it; others even maintained or reintroduced it. Today, economists, lawyers, and politicians discuss the opportunity of a tax applied directly on the personal wealth as well as its tax nature. Considered as ideological and marginal, and sometimes symbolic and solidary, the wealth tax remains a good means of contributive faculties apprehension in pursuing tax equity objective. This presentation aims at explaining the meaning and the scope of wealth taxation in the light of the Algerian and French experiences.

Djalel Maherzi is currently visiting the Department of Tax and Fiscal Law at the University of Graz. He is an Associate Professor at the Law Faculty of Algiers University.
