

International Graduate Study Programme in Cultural Sociology Call for applications 2024 for the University of Graz as entrance university

The International Graduate Study Programme in Cultural Sociology provides a unique study path in at least two universities of the international consortium, a state-of-the-art education in Cultural Sociology, and insights into the ways in which cultural practices are involved in the production of social cleavages and how they are also shaped by these cleavages. You will deepen your knowledge of the socio-cultural processes that shape our world.

Application deadline: June 1, 2024 (23:59 CEST)

You will study the complex interaction of culture with social, political, and economic processes and structures in the context of a broad range of current social issues, such as migration, urban development and social movements.

We believe that Central and Southeastern Europe, with its long history of multicultural encounters, conflicts and cohesion-building activities, is the best place to study cultural practices and cultural differences.

Participating Universities: University of Graz (Austria), Masaryk University (Czech Republic), University of Trento (Italy), University of Zadar (Croatia)

Programme Outline: 4 semesters full time (120 ECTS), 1 mandatory mobility semester (30 ECTS), Language of instruction: English, German, Italian, Croatian and Czech.
