

Mobility Guide

Academic Year 2025/26

Introduction

Dear student,

This booklet serves as a guide to help you decide which mobility university you want to apply for. It provides a short presentation of each partner institution, an overview of courses, contact persons, etc. We hope this can help you establishing which university suits your interests best. The guidebook is organized along the two tracks of our Master Programme: The first part of this booklet presents our partner universities suitable for the History track, the second part lists our partner institutions for the Law & Politics track of the Master in Southeast European Studies.

Please keep in mind that the list of courses offered at the partner university may change. In many universities across Europe, the finalized course list is only confirmed shortly before the start of the new academic year—sometimes in the summer or just before the semester begins. This can be due to changes in student enrolment numbers and may impact both the programme structure and course offerings in English at the host university, as well as your own plans. To ensure you have the latest information, please always check the latest course offerings in English with the local academic coordinator at the host institution before making your final decision about your mobility university!

Please also note, that your Learning Agreement must be accepted both by the Academic Coordinator of the Host University and by the Head of the Curricula Commission at Uni Graz (i.e., Assoc. Prof. Emma Lantschner).

Overview of Mobility Universities

A) History Track

University	Courses offered in English*
Babeş-Bolyai University of Cluj	No
University of Bologna	✓
Central European University (Vienna) ^w	✓
University of Ljubljana ^{a, b}	Depending on the year
University of Novi Sad	No

Note: Students cannot combine courses from different faculties within the same university (e.g., in Zagreb, Ljubljana, Sarajevo).

- *: The university offers enough courses in English language per semester to achieve the required 30 ECTS for the mobility semester. When there is an insufficient number of courses in English, students can usually take individual consultations and examinations in English.
- a: Students must individually contact the institutions to find out about the courses offered. Furthermore, the head of the curricula commission of your home university must confirm your module choices.
- b: It is unclear if students of this track have the option to take a sufficient number of courses in English language at this institution.
- c: Students on this track who wish to spend a mobility at this university must consult the head of the curricula commission at their home university to ensure their module choices align with their study plan.
- w: This mobility option is only available in Winter Semesters. Students do not receive funding for mobility semester in Austria.

Babeş-Bolyai University of Cluj Faculty of History & Philosophy

Presentation of the Institution:

Multilingualism, Multiculturality

Babeş-Bolyai University is the oldest academic institution in Romanian, which embodies the entire academic tradition in Transylvania, inaugurated with the Jesuit College founded by Prince Stephan Báthory in 1581.

Babeş-Bolyai University brings together the cultural, scientific, and religious traditions in Transylvania, having developed a multicultural educational programme according to the legislation in force in Romania and according to European values.

Located in a geographical area characterized by the presence of diverse ethnic and religious groups, Babeş-Bolyai University adheres to a policy of multiculturalism, its students and teaching staff being Romanian, as well as Hungarian, German and Roma.

In order to respect this multicultural structure, all university bodies (and in particular the governing bodies) are organized so as to take into account the three ethnic and linguistic components. The deputy Dean or the scientific secretary of each faculty must belong either to the Hungarian or to the German minority in order to administer their respective line of study. Moreover, at the central level, each of these three groups is represented by a vice-rector, who is also a member of the Senate's College, and by a specific general secretariat. Therefore, the university's executive board comprises 20 representatives of these ethnic groups holding offices such as those of vice-rectors, deans, deputy-deans, scientific secretaries and heads of departments.

About the Faculty of History and Philosophy

The Faculty of History and Philosophy is the successor of the Faculties of Philology and Philosophy, that functioned at the University of Cluj since 1872.

The faculty currently comprises eight departments: the Department of Ancient History and Archaeology, of Medieval History, of Modern History, International Studies and Contemporary History, of History in Hungarian Language, of Philosophy, of Premodern and Romanian Philosophy, and of Philosophy in Hungarian Language.

Several research institutes and centres function within or in connection to the Faculty for History and Philosophy: Institute for Pre- and Protohistory, for Classical Studies, for Central European Studies (ISCE), for Oral History, the Italo-Romanian Institute for History Studies, the Institute for International Studies, the Centre of Study for Dacian and Roman History and Archaeology, The "Altiero Spinelli" Centre for Study of European Organization (CASSOE), the Seminary for Historical Anthropology, for Historical Demography, the Centre for Ancient and Medieval Studies, and the Centre for Applied Research in Phenomenology (CECAF).

Currently, approximately 1500 students attend courses of the Faculty of History and Philosophy, in Romanian, Hungarian and English language, in the 10 Bachelor (3 years) and 17

Master programmes (2 years) in three fields (History, Philosophy and International Relations, European Studies) and in the doctoral school. Website: <http://hiphi.ubbcluj.ro/>

About Our Master Programme "History of South East Europe"

The Master Programme History of South East Europe is organized in cooperation with the Master Programme History and Socio-Anthropology of the Modern Era.

The Master Programme centres around the history of Southeast Europe and its integration in the broader historical and cultural context: political history, social and political imaginary, population history and historical demography, economic structures and political and cultural institutions, historical anthropology etc. The programme is directed at graduates in humanities and offers the possibility to analyse the modernization phenomenon in South-east European society.

The programme is connected to the research activity of the Seminary of Historical Anthropology within the Department of Modern History, of the Centre for Demographic Research of Babeş-Bolyai University, as well as with the ones of the partner universities.

Career Prospects include teaching and research at universities and schools, employment in international organizations, public institutions, diplomacy, museums, libraries and archives, cultural and research management, media, political consulting, public relations, etc. The study programme can be found here: <https://hiphi.ubbcluj.ro/Public/File/planuri/2022/IES.pdf>

Department of Political and Social Science

Presentation of the Institution

The international Master of Arts in East European and Eurasian Studies (MIREES) is a second cycle Joint Degree (120 ECTS), awarded by the University of Bologna, Department of Political and Social Sciences together with two partner universities: Vytautas Magnus University at Kaunas and the University of Zagreb. MIREES also benefits from cooperation with Comenius University Bratislava, European University Viadrina, Jagiellonian University in Krakow, Tbilisi State University, and the University of Helsinki.

MIREES is an innovative graduate programme, taught entirely in English, unique in Italy and Europe, devoted to students having a background in Economics, Politics, International Relations, History, Languages or Cultural studies at large – and who would like to acquire a specialized, in-depth knowledge of Eastern Europe and the broader Eurasian space. This variegated, geopolitically crucial area can only be understood through an interdisciplinary approach which combines political, economic, cultural, and historical perspectives. Moreover, students are asked to gain direct experiences on the ground: first, through a 5-month compulsory mobility in one of the partner or associated universities from the area; second, through guest lectures with academics, activists, and politicians from Eastern Europe and Eurasia; finally, if students wish, also through fieldwork or further exchange programmes in preparation of their thesis.

MIREES combines an academic approach with professional training and also helps forge connections with potential insightful consultants, analysts, managers as Area Experts for international agencies, public administrations, private and public companies, and NGOs, while also offering a solid basis for further studies at PhD level.

Central European University (Vienna)
Department for Nationalism Studies

Please notice: A mobility semester at CEU is only possible in Winter Semester (Fall Term).

Presentation of the Institution:

The Nationalism Studies Program was established by Central European University with the aim of engaging students in an empirical and theoretical study of issues of nationalism, self-determination, problems of state-formation, ethnic conflict, minority protection and the related theme of globalization. Drawing upon the uniquely supranational milieu of Central European University, the programme encourages a critical and non-sectarian study of nationalism.

The mission of the Nationalism Studies Program is to familiarize students with the interdisciplinary scholarly approaches in the study of nationalism. The aim of the programme is to encourage intellectual innovation and inventive research inquiry which transcend traditional disciplinary boundaries. Our students have the in-depth scientific knowledge to approach topical issues in nationalism studies from a multi-disciplinary perspective and to critically examine problems in the scholarship which are too complex to be understood or handled within the framework of a single academic discipline.

By combining political sciences, social sciences and legal studies approaches, our curriculum centres on developing the conceptual knowledge and research methodologies which enable students to apply theoretical knowledge in practice. Our graduates are competent scholars and professionals with the proper academic training to merge concepts, theories and methodologies of different disciplines and to put them to effective use in their work. The module structure is designed to make sure that all our students familiarize with all the relevant disciplines and methods in nationalism studies.

All our courses pay special attention to methodologies relevant for the particular topic. In addition to the theoretical and methodological training included both in disciplinary and interdisciplinary courses, we have an introductory course to the study of nationalism, special thesis research courses, and methods classes that offer a holistic overview of all research methodologies used in the field of nationalism studies.

All courses in the programme are seminars. In the classroom, students are not only passive recipients of ready-made answers, but actively participate in the discussions and in their presentations, they critically engage and experiment with the presented theories and concepts through case studies.

The Nationalism Studies Program is a postgraduate Master's programme registered in Austria and the US.

University of Ljubljana
Faculty of Arts

Please notice:

We do not have a distinct mobility agreement with the University of Ljubljana as it regards students of the history track. Nonetheless you may spend your mobility semester there, as an Erasmus+ agreement is in force. In case you want to stay at the Department of History of the University of Ljubljana, you need to plan your stay (incl. choice of modules) individually and to get in touch with the contact persons (the International Office (<https://www.ff.uni-lj.si/studij/international-office-incoming-students-and-professors>) and the coordinator at the Department of History (<https://www.ff.uni-lj.si/studij/international-office-incoming-students/departamental-coordinators-international-relations>) yourself.

Furthermore, please contact the head of curricula commission of your home university in order to make sure, that your choices coincide with your overall study plan.

Presentation of the Institution:

The University of Ljubljana is the oldest university in Slovenia, founded in 1919. It is ranked among the top 3% in the world according to several university ranking lists.

The Faculty of Arts celebrated its 100th anniversary in 2019. It is the largest and one of the founding faculties of the University of Ljubljana. The faculty has 21 departments with almost 5,000 students currently enrolled, around 700 university teachers, and around 170 specialist support and administrative staff members. More than 30 scientific disciplines can be studied at the Faculty of Arts. There are 34 active study programmes at the BA level, 42 programmes at the MA level, and a doctoral study programme at every department.

The Department of History (<https://zgodovina.ff.uni-lj.si/en/about-department-history>) is one of the founding departments of the Faculty of Arts. With more than 400 enrolled students, it is also one of the largest departments at the Faculty of Arts. Its century-long tradition makes it the oldest history department in Slovenia, offering non-pedagogical and pedagogical study programmes. The department consists of six units, namely the chair of ancient history, the chair of medieval history and auxiliary sciences of history, the chair of early modern history, the chair of nineteenth-century history, the chair of contemporary history, and the chair of history didactics. Moreover, there is a departmental library with some 70,000 volumes. Study at the department focuses on understanding the history of ancient civilizations (Roman and Greek history), medieval history, early modern, late modern, and contemporary history. The study of each period includes a general history course, a SE-European history course, and a Slovene history course. In addition, students can study history didactics, a selection of more general (like introduction to history, theory of history) or more thematically focused courses (like historical geography, social history, historical anthropology, cultural history, and history of women). In addition to a course or courses at our department, incoming students are welcome to select courses at other departments of the Faculty of Arts, like other international courses with regular lectures held in English (<https://www.ff.uni-lj.si/en/node/7336>).

Students are provided with the skills and knowledge required for work at institutes, in archives, museums and schools, as well as in other professions, in tourism and public media, for instance.

In line with Slovene legislation, courses for Slovene students are taught in Slovene. We provide incoming students from abroad with study literature in English, offer regular consultations to incoming students, and enable them to take exams and write seminars in English. In addition, every academic year, in the winter semester, one course two courses (5 ECTS, four lessons of lectures weekly in each subject) are held in English for incoming students. These courses usually have about 20 attendees. The department has rich experience in Erasmus exchanges. Incoming students can collect 30 ECTS/semester as a combination of the courses with regular lectures held in English (in winter semester), and courses combining individual study and consultations with professors. In addition, students can take classes with regular lectures held in English at other departments of our faculty that can often be recognized as elective courses at their home faculties (ask your coordinator at your home faculty to confirm the recognition of the desired courses selection).

University of Novi Sad

Department of History

Presentation of the Institution:

The Faculty of Philosophy is one of the two oldest faculties of the University of Novi Sad with a rich educational tradition founded in 1954, successfully spreading knowledge and promoting excellence in the field of social sciences and humanities for more than six decades. It has grown to become a recognizable institution of higher education in Europe, offering more than 30 accredited study programmes at all three levels of study (BA, MA and PhD).

The faculty is a modern scientific-educational institution with 18 departments, being home to more than 5,500 students and around 400 staff members. There are 14 centres at the faculty, including the Centre for Serbian as a Foreign Language, where the foreign students have the opportunity to take classes of Serbian language, and the Centre for Languages, which offers courses in more than 25 global languages.

In accordance with the European standards in higher education, the faculty educates future experts in philology, history, psychology, pedagogy, philosophy, sociology, social work, journalism, cultural and communication studies.

The Department of History was founded in the same year as the Faculty of Philosophy itself and the primary task of the department was to organize and conduct regular classes in history and academic research.

The Department of History at the Faculty of Philosophy in Novi Sad was consolidated with the Institute for Historical Research of Vojvodina in 1975, because of the need to improve the overall teaching and academic research within the Province of Vojvodina. The department regularly publishes the journal Istraživanja (Journal of historical researches), which has an immense impact on the academic community regarding this subject field. The department also founded Centre for Historical research, which organizes various international conferences, and started a successful publishing both in Serbian and English.

*Please note that courses are offered only in the BCMS language; however, one-on-one consultations with lecturers and examinations are usually also possible in English. This option is available for students who feel comfortable auditing lectures in BCMS but prefer to take exams in English.

University of Regensburg
Chair of Southeast and East European History

Presentation of the Institution:

Since 2008, the Chair of Southeast and East European History has been part of the university's focus on Eastern and Southeastern Europe in teaching and research. Our chair pursues historical and interdisciplinary research that creates knowledge about a region which plays an important role in European politics. The chair is closely affiliated with the Leibniz Institute for East and Southeast European Studies (Leibniz-Institut für Ost-und Südosteuropaforschung), an independent academic institution that focuses on the history and economic development of Eastern and Southeastern Europe. In collaboration with this institute, our chair aims at creating a vibrant and international academic atmosphere. Another institution with which our chair closely cooperates is the Department for Interdisciplinary and Multiscalar Area Studies (DIMAS), which bundles the area studies activities at the University of Regensburg and offers lectures, workshops etc. connecting and comparing different world regions (especially Western Europe, North America, Latin America).

A regular research seminar, frequent guest lectures, workshops and conferences bring together local students and researchers and guests from other universities and from abroad in the common pursuit of further scholarship on Eastern and Southeastern Europe.

The Leibniz Institute for East and Southeast European Studies hosts one of the largest libraries specializing in Southeast and East European Studies (more than 300,000 volumes).

Our teaching and research activities on Southeastern Europe have recently become even more intensive since in July 2022, we launched a new project named "A small but fertile field: Strengthening Southeast European Studies in Regensburg" (SeeFField), financed by the Volkswagen Foundation. For incoming exchange students, this will mean an enlarged variety of lectures, seminars, and webinars, as well as the introduction of a student-led blog on Southeastern Europe (<https://seeffield.app.uni-regensburg.de/blog/>); and a greater variety of language teaching, since from 2023 we employ a lecturer for Albanian.

UNIVERSITY OF SARAJEVO-FACULTY OF PHILOSOPHY HISTORY DEPARTMENT

Presentation of the Institution:

The Faculty of Philosophy at the University of Sarajevo is the oldest institution of higher education in the humanities and social sciences in Bosnia and Herzegovina. Initially, it was part of a unified teaching and research institution alongside the Faculty of Natural Sciences. Together, they encompassed eight subject areas: General and National History, Serbo-Croatian Language and Yugoslav Literature, German Language and Literature, French Language and Literature, Oriental Philology, Mathematics, Chemistry, and Geography.

Today, the Faculty of Philosophy stands as a prestigious higher education institution renowned for its teaching and research. It continues to exert a significant influence on Bosnian and Herzegovinian society.

About the History Department

The History Department is one of the oldest departments at the Faculty of Philosophy in Sarajevo, originating from the Chair of History established in 1950. Since its inception, members of the History Department have been respected scholars in the field of history. The first professors of the Department were also among the founders of the Faculty of Philosophy. For decades, the Department has served as a meeting point for historians from across the Western Balkans.

The Department of History prepares future history teachers and scholars. By combining subject areas offered by other departments at the Faculty of Philosophy and faculties within the University of Sarajevo, students can also prepare for various other professions in addition to history.

The curriculum is designed to prepare students for teaching in primary and secondary schools, as well as for employment in various academic and cultural institutions such as universities, research institutes, museums, archives, libraries, national cultural societies, and tourist agencies. Graduates of the Department of History can also find employment in state institutions, media organizations, and other fields. Several alumni have become respected diplomats, writers, and journalists or have pursued careers in the public and cultural sectors.

History at the Department is studied through three concentric circles: Bosnian-Herzegovinian history, regional history (Southeast Europe), and European and world history. Within this framework, key aspects of political, economic, social, and cultural history, as well as the history of daily life, are explored. The teaching process focuses on imparting the knowledge and skills essential for future professionals while fostering critical thinking. Additionally, the Chair of Art History is an integral part of the Department.

A significant number of study trips to foreign universities, lasting one or several semesters, have been organized as part of international academic exchanges and independent student initiatives. Many graduates of the first study cycle continue their second-cycle studies at universities across Europe. At the same time, the Department of History has hosted exchange students across all three study cycles, welcoming individuals from various academic centres, including Austria, Germany, Denmark, Italy, the Netherlands, Croatia, Serbia, Slovenia, the Czech Republic, Japan, and Turkey.

Since 2010, the Department of History has been editing and publishing its own journal, Radovi Filozofskog fakulteta (Historija, Historija umjetnosti, Arheologija) [Faculty of Philosophy Articles (History, Art History, Archaeology)].

University of Zagreb

Department of History

Presentation of the Institution

At the Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences in Zagreb history was thought from the very beginning of the modern university teaching that started in 1874. The history department at the faculty was established at the end of 1950s. It has been organized in several chairs, offering four-year undergraduate programme in history and postgraduate programme in the Croatian history. At the undergraduate level history has been studied as one major or combined with another major as a double major programme. At the history department there studied numerous generations of history teachers in elementary and Optional schools, university professors, historians and experts in various fields of cultural and public sector in Croatia and elsewhere.

Presentation of the Institution:

The programme will formally be developed within and affiliated to the Department of Political Science, although it may involve teachers from other three departments at the faculty – International, Journalism and Communication and Social Policy & Work.

The University of Belgrade – Faculty of Political Science (FPS) started its work in 1968, as the first teaching and scientific institution of that kind in Yugoslavia. Today it consists of four departments – for Political Science, International Politics, Journalism and Communication Studies, Social Policy and Social Work. Studies are organized fully in line with the Bologna Declaration standards. Altogether, it has 165 employees (115 teaching staff). The faculty organizes undergraduate and graduate – MA and PhD studies, development and applied research, specialized innovative courses, trainings and workshops.

International cooperation, on a very diverse basis, is a high priority.

Currently, FPS participates in several EU funded projects (GeoPowerEU, AfriqeuEurope, EMBRACE, LINK, EUROPIA). The faculty was a consortium partner in graduate studies “Joint European Master in Comparative Local Development for the Balkans and other areas in transformation” - University of Trento / Erasmus Mundus Programme. Currently it is a consortium partner in two joint MA programmes carried out entirely in English – Joint Master's Programme in Southeast European Studies and Peace, Security and Development.

The faculty also has publishing activities, appropriate library and documentary funds. Within the faculty there are several research centres for specific research fields.

University of Bologna
Department of Political and Social Science

Presentation of the Institution

The international Master of Arts in East European and Eurasian Studies (MIREES) is a second cycle Joint Degree (120 ECTS), awarded by the University of Bologna, Department of Political and Social Sciences together with two partner universities: Vytautas Magnus University at Kaunas and the University of Zagreb. MIREES also benefits from cooperation with Comenius University Bratislava, European University Viadrina, Jagiellonian University in Krakow, Tbilisi State University, and the University of Helsinki.

MIREES is an innovative graduate programme, taught entirely in English, unique in Italy and Europe, devoted to students having a background in Economics, Politics, International Relations, History, Languages or Cultural studies at large – and who would like to acquire a specialized, in-depth knowledge of Eastern Europe and the broader Eurasian space. This variegated, geopolitically crucial area can only be understood through an interdisciplinary approach which combines political, economic, cultural, and historical perspectives. Moreover, students are asked to gain direct experiences on the ground: first, through a 5-month compulsory mobility in one of the partner or associated universities from the area; second, through guest lectures with academics, activists, and politicians from Eastern Europe and Eurasia; finally, if students wish, also through fieldwork or further exchange programmes in preparation of their theses.

MIREES combines an academic approach with professional training and also helps forge connections with potential insightful consultants, analysts, managers as Area Experts for international agencies, public administrations, private and public companies, and NGOs, while also offering a solid basis for further studies at PhD level.

Central European University (Vienna)
Department for Nationalism Studies

Please notice: A mobility semester at CEU is only possible in Winter Semester (Fall Term).

Presentation of the Institution:

The Nationalism Studies Program was established by Central European University with the aim of engaging students in an empirical and theoretical study of issues of nationalism, self-determination, problems of state-formation, ethnic conflict, minority protection and the related theme of globalization. Drawing upon the uniquely supranational milieu of Central European University, the programme encourages a critical and non-sectarian study of nationalism.

The mission of the Nationalism Studies Program is to familiarize students with the interdisciplinary scholarly approaches in the study of nationalism. The aim of the programme is to encourage intellectual innovation and inventive research inquiry which transcend traditional disciplinary boundaries. Our students have the in-depth scientific knowledge to approach topical issues in nationalism studies from a multi-disciplinary perspective and to critically examine problems in the scholarship which are too complex to be understood or handled within the framework of a single academic discipline.

By combining political sciences, social sciences and legal studies approaches, our curriculum centres on developing the conceptual knowledge and research methodologies which enable students to apply theoretical knowledge in practice. Our graduates are competent scholars and professionals with the proper academic training to merge concepts, theories and methodologies of different disciplines and to put them to effective use in their work. The module structure is designed to make sure that all our students familiarize with all the relevant disciplines and methods in nationalism studies.

All our courses pay special attention to methodologies relevant for the particular topic. In addition to the theoretical and methodological training included both in disciplinary and interdisciplinary courses, we have an introductory course to the study of nationalism, special thesis research courses, and methods classes that offer a holistic overview of all research methodologies used in the field of nationalism studies.

All courses in the programme are seminars. In the classroom, students are not only passive recipients of ready-made answers, but actively participate in the discussions and in their presentations, they critically engage and experiment with the presented theories and concepts through case studies.

The Nationalism Studies Program is a postgraduate Master's programme registered in Austria and the US.

Presentation of the Institution:

The University of Ljubljana is the oldest university in Slovenia, founded in 1919. It is ranked among top 3 % in the world according to the university ranking lists.

The Faculty of Social Sciences (FSS) has over 2,500 students and approx. 170 higher education teachers and researchers. It offers 13 undergraduate and 21 graduate study programmes. It is well known for its interdisciplinary study programmes, research activities and high-quality teaching, as well as many curricular and extra-curricular activities.

The study of International Relations at the FSS was established about 40 years ago. It is now an independent study programme, at all three levels, and the Chair of International Relations is part of the Political Science Department. International Relations as a distinctive interdisciplinary study of the science of International Relations, has dealt with political, economic and legal issue-areas in the contemporary international community with many different actors, factors, relations and processes between actors and norms. The Chair of International Relations offers deep theoretical foundations, professional knowledge, skills and competences such as interdisciplinary, methodological-analytical proficiency, mastering of negotiation and rhetorical skills. Our graduates can be found working in private and public sector, in Slovenia and in European and international institutions.

Additionally, students within the Law and Politics track, who have an academic background in international relations can choose to obtain a double-degree with the University of Ljubljana. More information can be provided at the mobility information sessions, as well as from Uni Graz academic coordinators of the programme -- prof. Emma Lantschner and Dr. Sanja Kmežic.

Presentation of the Institution:

Since 2008, the Chair of Southeast and East European History has been part of the university's focus on Eastern and Southeastern Europe in teaching and research. Our chair pursues historical and interdisciplinary research that creates knowledge about a region which plays an important role in European politics. The chair is closely affiliated with the Leibniz Institute for East and Southeast European Studies (Leibniz-Institut für Ost-und Südosteuropaforschung), an independent academic institution that focuses on the history and economic development of Eastern and Southeastern Europe. In collaboration with this institute, our chair aims at creating a vibrant and international academic atmosphere. Another institution with which our chair closely cooperates is the Department for Interdisciplinary and Multiscalar Area Studies (DIMAS), which bundles the area studies activities at the University of Regensburg and offers lectures, workshops etc. connecting and comparing different world regions (especially Western Europe, North America, Latin America).

A regular research seminar, frequent guest lectures, workshops and conferences bring together local students and researchers and guests from other universities and from abroad in the common pursuit of further scholarship on Eastern and Southeastern Europe.

The Leibniz Institute for East and Southeast European Studies hosts one of the largest libraries specializing in Southeast and East European Studies (more than 300,000 volumes).

Our teaching and research activities on Southeastern Europe have recently become even more intensive since in July 2022, we launched a new project named "A small but fertile field: Strengthening Southeast European Studies in Regensburg" (SeeFField), financed by the Volkswagen Foundation. For incoming exchange students, this will mean an enlarged variety of lectures, seminars, and webinars, as well as the introduction of a student-led blog on Southeastern Europe (<https://seeffield.app.uni-regensburg.de/blog/>); and a greater variety of language teaching, since from 2023 we employ a lecturer for Albanian.

Ss. Cyril and Methodius University, Skopje

Faculty of Law "Iustinianus Primus"

Presentation of the Institution:

The Faculty of Law "Iustinianus Primus" in Skopje is member of the Ss. Cyril and Methodius University in Skopje, the biggest and the oldest university in North Macedonia. Ss. Cyril and Methodius University in Skopje was founded in 1949 as the first university in the country. On 3 November 1951 the Government of the People's Republic of Macedonia founded the Faculty of Law and Economics as a member of the Ss. Cyril and Methodius University in Skopje. In 1980 the Faculty of Law opened a new department for journalism studies and in 1993 initiated the political science studies. In the last 55 years over 13000 students have graduated from the Faculty of Law.

The Faculty of Law offers courses on BA, MA and PhD level in the fields of law, political science, journalism and communicology.

On 1 April 2005 the Scientific Council of the Faculty of Law adopted the new curriculum for undergraduate and postgraduate studies of all academic programmes. Since then, the curriculum has been constantly updated and is completely harmonized with the European Credit Transfer System and is based on three cycles of studies. The curriculum offers four independent academic programmes in law, political science, journalism and public relations. The educational process is carried out through lectures, seminars, workshops, clinics and practical work. In addition to teaching activities, the Faculty of Law is committed to highest quality research within the fields of law, governance studies, political science, media studies and journalism.

Today the Faculty of Law "Iustinianus Primus" represents the leading academic institution in the field of law, political science and journalism in North Macedonia. The faculty has established academic cooperation with 70 faculties in the world, incorporated modern technology in its educational process and opened several research centres.

Scholarship information & general information

During your Joint Master's programme, you have to complete a minimum of 30 ECTS credits at one of the partner institutions of the consortium as a mandatory requirement for graduation.¹ The University of Graz offers financial support for the obligatory mobility by using existing scholarship programmes such as Erasmus+. Thus, additional regulations governing the individual scholarship programme may apply.

Joint Programme students can spend an additional mobility period abroad provided the following rules as set out in the curriculum are respected:

- At least 60 ECTS credits have to be successfully completed at the entrance resp. degree awarding institution.
- At least 30 ECTS credits have to be successfully completed at a partner university in the consortium.

This enables students to take a maximum of 30 ECTS credits during an additional mobility. It is highly recommended to check with the academic coordinator beforehand if the planned study programme can be transferred/recognized.

It is also possible to take an internship abroad. Here we also recommend to check if the internship can be transferred/recognized into your study programme (e.g., as free elective credits). Another option for an additional mobility is to carry out research work for the Master thesis (e.g., within the programme: Self-organized stays).

Erasmus+ Info

Information: <https://international.uni-graz.at/en/stays-abroad/erasmus/>

Application:

In order to receive the Erasmus+ scholarship, students have to hand in an application via mobility online in accordance with the programme deadlines and requirements. Application is mandatory and consists of several steps. All deadlines have to be respected.

Learning Agreement:

Prior to departure, each Erasmus+ student must sign a Learning Agreement setting out the programme of studies to be followed, as agreed by the student, the home and host university.

In your case, you indicate your specialization track as "mobility window". The Learning Agreement must be signed by all three parties (student, Uni Graz, host institution) and then uploaded to mobility online.

Fees:

Students completing the mandatory semester abroad as part of the Master's programme are not charged any further tuition fees at the host university if they pay their fees at their home university. At the University of Graz, students on mobility get a tuition fee waiver (except for the student union fee) for the mobility period. Within the Erasmus+ programme, the International Relations Office (IRO) informs the Office of Academic Affairs directly about the fee waiver and your payment information in your UNIGRAZonline account will be amended automatically.

Make sure you pay the student union fee in order to stay enrolled at the University of Graz. Otherwise, you will be ex-matriculated, a transfer of credits is not possible and you will lose the Erasmus+ scholarship.

Scholarship payment:

Once you have been nominated by the IRO of the University of Graz, you will receive an e-mail with further instructions and you will have to sign a scholarship contract. When you have signed the contract, you will receive 75% of the scholarship before the mobility. The last 25% of the scholarship will be paid once you have handed in the required final documents.

Scholarship amount: up to 520€ per month depending on the host country.

Note: Mandatory mobility stays that cannot be covered by an Erasmus+ scholarship will be supported by a scholarship paid by the University of Graz.

Support at host university

You will be integrated in all incoming student support mechanism of the resp. partner institution. In addition, you have the possibility to get in contact with the academic coordinator or the administrative coordinator of the partner institution.

Transfer of credits:

After your return to the University of Graz you will need to apply for transfer of credits "Recognitions/Achievements supplements" (in German: Meine Anerkennungen/Leistungsnachträge) via UNIGRAZonline.

In addition, you need to send the official transcript of records to the Dean's office.
