

ABOLISH PROPERTY- BLACK FEMINISM REVISITED

Prof. Dr. Sabine Bröck
University of Bremen, Germany

Prof. Dr. Sabine Bröck a renowned professor of English-Speaking Cultures and Transnational/Transcultural Studies and an expert of African American writing and culture will address the theoretical advances of Black feminism's history in the U.S. as an intersectional self-empowering intervention against prevailing machismo in 1960s and later Black movements, as a correction to Black historiography, as a radical scholarly and activist anti-racist practice, and as epistemic rupture of white gender theory.
