

Prof. Daniel A. Smith, Ph.D.

Clark and Mary Wright Chair of New Testament Theology
Associate Professor of New Testament Language and Literature
Huron University College at Western University, London, Ontario, Canada

His Sepulchre Shall Be Glorious The Burial of Jesus as a Theological Problem

Donnerstag, 11. Juni 2015, 13.30 – 15.00 Uhr
Hörsaal „Max Josef Metzger“ (HS 47.02)

Institut für Neutestamentliche Bibelwissenschaft
Katholisch-Theologische Fakultät
<http://neues-testament.uni-graz.at>

In a 1988 article, Raymond Brown argued that Mark depicts the burial of Jesus as “dishonourable” or “shameful”, a depiction which Brown thought might reflect closely the historical burial itself. Brown’s view has been accepted by some New Testament scholars, but rejected or ignored by others. The lecture examines the merits of the thesis and considers some of its implications for a number of important issues, including the question of responsibility for the execution of Jesus, the nature of the NT witness to his death and resurrection, and christological reflection on the nature of the “self-emptying” of the Son.

Der Forschungsschwerpunkt von Prof. Smith liegt in der Auslegung der synoptischen Evangelien. Er ist einer der beiden Vorsitzenden der “Q Section” in der “Society of Biblical Literature”.

