The Aggression Against Ukraine and Austrian Neutrality

Prof. Erika de Wet

Professor of International Law and
Head of the Institute for International Law and International Relations, University of Graz

Since 1955 the international law construct of neutrality is anchored in the Austrian constitution. This lecture assesses the legal implications of this neutral status in the wake of the EU response to Russia's aggression against Ukraine. This includes an assessment of the core elements of neutrality, examples of potential violations of neutrality, and more broadly the distinction between military support and conflict participation.
