Why should I study Law in Graz?

Broad legal education

Graduates of the Diploma Programme in Law acquire expertise not only on the core subjects of Austrian law – public law, private law and criminal law – but also on special legal disciplines, such as labour and social security law, fiscal law, insolvency law and corporate law. They obtain advanced knowledge in international dimensions of law, such as European law, international law and comparative law, all taught by leaders in their field and highly skilled professionals eager to share their knowledge with their students.

Key competences and soft skills

In addition to essential skills in solving legal problems, graduates of the Diploma Programme in Law are able to present arguments, to develop and refine positions and to communicate effectively. They have great social skills and stand out when it comes to oral and written communication. In addition to that they have acquired remarkable organizational skills and are well equipped to apply their knowledge broadly and across disciplines.
