

An experimental investigation of group identity of successful collusion under the shadow of leniency policies

- Bid rigging, as the antitrust violation most studied in the literature, requires a group of bidders to cooperate and trust each other. On the other hand, the most important tool in detecting antitrust violations are whistleblowers that alert authorities in exchange for reduced or cancelled fines.
- In this master thesis, the effect of group cohesion on the success of collusion is studied in a laboratory experiment.

Supervision

- Stefan Thalmann & Jürgen Fleiß, BANDAS-Center, University of Graz. Contact: juergen.fleiss@uni-graz.at