

Einladung
zum Vortrag von

C. Laura Lovin, PhD

(EC-Marie Skłodowska-Curie postdoctoral fellow, School of Education, University of Strathclyde)

Post-socialist Migrant Domesticity: The Case of Filipina Domestic Workers in Romania

Zeit: Montag, 29.05.2017 um 16.00 Uhr

Ort: SR 15.4D, RESOWI-Zentrum, Gebäudeteil G, 4. Stock (Institut für Soziologie)

Zum Vortrag:

Transnational work migration from the Philippines has received sustained academic scrutiny since the early 1980s. The arrival of Filipina domestic workers into Romanian households is a newer phenomenon, which became visible around the year 2008, at the peak of the global economic crisis. The Filipina domestic workers in Romania caught the attention of local journalists, bloggers, artists and activists. This presentation introduces the early stages of a new research project that sets out to investigate Filipina workers' experiences, their representations in the media and the visual arts, as well as their activism in an effort to illuminate the processes that redraw notions of gender, class, and racialization within the context of Romania as an immigrant-receiving country. Romania is one of the most significant migrant-sending countries in Europe. How does this fact shape the ways in which the incoming migrant domestic workers from the Philippines are treated and constructed? How do the state-socialist and post-state-socialist gender ideologies factor into the understanding and production of their life and work circumstances? And how are the notions of domesticity, motherhood, household work, professional work and socio-economic stratification negotiated through this transnational encounter?

Zur Vortragenden:

C. Laura Lovin is EC-Marie Skłodowska-Curie postdoctoral fellow in the School of Education at the University of Strathclyde, where she studies the transnational journeys, the quests for employment, and the trials of resettlement of immigrant workers from Romania in two major sites of global capitalism, the cities of London, U.K. and New York, U.S. Dr. Lovin received her PhD in Women's and Gender Studies in 2014 from Rutgers University. Her areas of specialization include: contemporary feminist theories, Eastern European feminism, cultural politics, and transnational mobilities. Her first book, Revitalizing Cities, Remaking Workers, Reconstructing Urban Economies in the Heart of the Twenty-first Century, is under contract with Routledge (2017).