Southeastern Europe and its postwar migration(s): a shared story

THE IDEA BEHIND

this virtual workshop is to bring together historians working in the field of postwar migration in the area of Southeastern Europe. It will include both brief individual presentations by historians based in Europe and overseas and a roundtable to allow a more vivid interaction. Presenters can use their allocated time of 10 minutes to present their latest work in the field, its relevance and resonance, or potential challenges specific to the area. In the roundtable, there will be more time to reflect on the crossroads of our research and potential new directions in the historiography of the area. The whole workshop will have a duration of approximately two hours.
